Are Prepared, at their

COLLEGE ANNIVERSARIES.

We have alluded to our own University commencement; it was a gathering worthy of commemoration. The soldiers' Alumni by their presence added largely to the attractiveness of the occasion. This was the case at all the commencements in the country. Memorial structures or buildings perpetuating the memory of the martyred dead was proposed at nearly all the college anniversaries.

At Dartmouth, Chief Justice Chase graced the occasion. In a speech he pronounced himself in favor of colored suffrage. In reference to a memorial building he eloquently spoke.

"He would rear it in all the massive-ness and strength of iron and granite and in all the beauty and perfection of design which the highest architectural skill and taste could devise. He would fill that memorial hall with the portraits of the martyred heroes of Dartmouth, and its niches with the sculptured forms of her distinguished sons whose lives and services have made her name honored in the land. But he would also erect to their memory and to the memory of every martyr in this war a broader, a grander monument, by laying the foundation of our regenerated redeemed Union upon the solid peditments and immovable corner stones of universe liberty and equality. This monument, this civil structure, so replete with the elements of moral grandeur, should possess such amplitude of base, and such majestic altitude of political, social and moral purity and beauty that its towering apex as it meets the serene skies of Heaven, and its vast base as it covers our whole land and the world, should be gilded with the eternal rays of the sun of freedom and liberty.

Harvard and Yale outdid all others.
The N. Y. Tribune says:

"The old way of Commencement was broken up, old traditions forgotten, and suddenly the enthusiasm of the young men, the devoted patriotism of both young and old, gave strength and force to the primness of college ceremonies."

Yale sent 788 pupils to the war—574 graduates.

"Many return no more; but the living summons back to hall and grove to tell them that no trophies of 'learning or civil honor are comparable to that fame which the soldier of the Union has fought for; the dead who point to the spirit of that more than Roman mother who said when her son took command of the first colored regiment from the north—'I am as proud of him as if I had heard that he was shot.'"

The following choice original poem was read at Harvard, by Wendell Holmes:

Four summers joined their golden light in leaves, Four wasteful autumns flung them to the gale,
Four winters wore the shroud the tempest weaves

The fourth was April wept o'er hill and vale, And still the war-clouds scowled on sea and land,
With the red gleams of battle staining thine
When lo! as parted by an angel hand They open, and the Heaven's again are blue.

Which is the dream, the present or the past?
The night of anguish or the joyous morn?
The long, long years with horrors overcast,
Or the sweet promise of the day new-born?

Tell us, oh father, as thine arms unfold Thy belted first-born in their first embrace, Murmuring a prayer the patriarch breathed
Of old—

Now let me die, for I have seen thy face!
Tell us, oh mother, nay, thou canst not speak;
But thy kind eyes shall answer, brimmed with joy—

Press thy mute lips against the sun-browned cheek,
Is this a phantom, thy returning boy?

Tell us, O maiden—ah, what canst thou tell That Nature's record is not first to teach—The open volume all can read so well,
With its twin crimson pages full of speech?

And ye who mourn your dead—now sternly tell us
The cruel hour that wrenched their lives away—Shadow'd with sorrow's midnight veil for you,
For them, the dawning of immortal day!

Dream-like these years of conflict, not a dream!
Death, pain, ashes, tell their awful tale;
Read by the flaming war-trail's lurid gleam;
No dream, but truth that turns the nations pale!

For on the pillar raised by martyr hands
Burns the rekindled beacon of the right, Sowing its seeds of fire o'er all the lands, Thrones look a century older in its light!

Rome had her triumphs: round the conquer-or's car
The ensigns waved, the brazen lions blew
And o'er the reeking spoils of bandit war With outspread wings the cruel eagles flew;

Arms, treasures, captives, kings in clanking chains Urged on by trampling cohorts bronzed and scarred,
And wild-eyed wonders snared on Libyan plains,
Lion, and ostrich, and camaleopard.

Vain all that pretors clutched, that consuls brought When Rome's returning legions crowned their lord;
Less than the least brave deed these hands have wrought

We clasp, unclenching from the bloody sword.

Theirs was the mighty work that seems foretold:
They know not half their glorious toil has won.

For this is Heaven's same battle—joined of old When Athens fought for us at Marathon!

Behold a vision none hath understood!
The breaking of the Apocalyptic seal; Twice rings the summons—Hail, and fire, and blood!

Then the third angel blows his trumpet peal.

Loud wail the dwellers on the myrtled coasts.
The green savannas swell the maddened cry,
And with a yell from all the demon hosts Falls the great star called Wormwood, from the sky!

Bitter it mingles with the poisoned flow Of the warm rivers winding to the shore, Thousands must drink the waves of death and woe,
But the star Wormwood stains the heavens no more!

Peace smiles at last; the Nation calls her sons
To sheath the sword, her battle flag she furly, Speaks in glad thunders from unshod guns And hides her rubies under milk-white pearls.

O ye that fought for Freedom, living, dead,
One sacred host of God's anointed Queen,
For every holy drop your veins have shed We breathe a welcome to our bowers of green!

Welcome, ye living! from the foeman's gripe Your country's banner it was yours to wrest.

Ah, many a forehead shows the banner stripe And stars, once crimson, hallow many a breast.

And ye, pale heroes, who from glory's bed Mark when your old battalions form in line,
Move in their marching ranks with noiseless tramp,
And shape unheard the evening countersign.

Come with your comrades, the returning brave,
Shoulder to shoulder they await you here;
These lent the life their martyr brothers gave,
Living and dead alike forever dear.

The following is an extract of an original poem at West Point by Dr. Holland (Timothy Titcomb). The writer had just been speaking of the fact that before the war West Point was at a discount, and was considered by many a useless waste of money. He then proceeded to speak of one of the West Point heroes thus:

Thanks to the school that gave to us the life
That has flamed highest in our noble strife;
The splendid soldier and the modest man, Who, with the hand to strike, and the head to plan.

Rose in the nation in the darkest hour
And rose from prowess up to power;
Whose giant combinations and campaigns Won from his boys the sobriquet—"Old Brains."

One thrill of joy we all remember well,
When Donelson, with all its thousand fell;
And when upon our nation's day of days,
After fierce struggles and prolonged delays, Belaguered Vicksburg dropped the rebel flag And bowed in dust before the Nation's flag;
And thirty thousand prisoners of war Marched out amid the smoke of one cigar.

Phrases were powerless to express our joy,
And e'en the bravest shouted like a boy;
But when our hero with his heroes all Sat down before the nation's capital,
And like a building fixed his awful grip Relentlessly on Richmond's quivering lip,
And held it quivering till his plans matured
And all his minor triumphs were secured,
And then shook out of its guilty soul
And swallowed Lee and all his army whole,
We went crazy, shouted, laughed, and cried, Rang bells, burst powder, sang and gloried!

Prayed all earnestly, and lauded most of all Him who had given the foe his fatal fall;
But quite forgot that cradle of cadets Where infant warriors sprout their epaulets, That school which reared to meet the Nation's want,
The peerless man and soldier, General Grant!

Thanks, too, for him, the gallant, dashing blond,
Light in the saddle, but heavy on a raid, Whose gallant rides will live on storied page
Like the brave exploits of a knight of old;
Who turned the valley of the Shenandoah
Into a long resounding threshing floor; Where saber flails whipped out the rebel grain;

And straw and chaff were threshed, and threshed again;
Man of few inches, every inch a giant, Flower of our chivalry, Phil. Sheridan!

a big one, over 5,000 present. Aside from six freight cars also filled. The people of Ann Arbor were surprised at the crowd.

Several speeches were made by their most eloquent speakers. The deliverance of down trodden Ireland was announced as the aim of the organization, and the Fenians were pushing ahead.

Would announce to the citizens of Ypsilanti and vicinity that, having recently removed their Boot and Shoe Store, also to the corner of Congress and Washington Streets, they are receiving a large and well selected stock of

FARM & HOUSEHOLD.

SHOEING HORSES THAT OVER-REACH.

In the Mark Lane Express, a blacksmith, who has had much experience in the art of shoeing, contends that in order to prevent horses from over-reaching they should be shod as follows:—Make the toe-caulks very low, forward, standing a little under, and the shoes set as far back as convenient, with heel caulk, so as to let the foot roll over as quick as possible. On the hind foot I have the heel-caulk low, and the toe-caulk high, and projecting forward, keeping back the hind foot while coming up over a high toe-caulk, thus giving time for the forward foot to get out of the way. If thus shod, the horse will travel clean, with out a click, and his speed will be increased on a trot fifteen or twenty seconds in a mile. The Express has the following comments on the above method:—"The reverse of this rule is generally practised. The blacksmiths, in view of preventing over-reaching, usually set the forward shoes as far forward as possible, and set the hind shoes as far back from the toe as they conveniently can. It remains for intelligent blacksmiths to decide which is the best method."

HAVING THINGS HANDY.

Under this head could be comprised many things, but I will only mention a few, and many would probably pursue a different course, but as we are all different in form and manners, so in expression.

In the first place, to have handy stumps, that is loose ones that when you mow you can work up to them, and just get off the machine, and move them and mow on, and when you rake do the same. Then again at plowing and harrowing such stumps are equally handy.

It is handy to leave the moving machine in the mow ready for another year. This is also handy for the manufacturer. We can leave the plows, harrows and horse rakes all in the field, handy for another year. It is not always convenient to haul these things into the barn or shed, and then drag them back in the same field next season; it is certainly more handy to leave them where next wanted. Now if we only think of these things we can save many steps by having things handy.—Cor. Ohio Farmer.

HARNESS.—During stormy days and leisure hours, clean, repair, oil and varnish harness. Always wet dry leather before oiling. Neat's foot oil is best for harness. An excellent black varnish for harness is half a pound of gum shellac dissolved in a pint of good alcohol, an ounce of good lamp black, and one ounce of gum camphor, corked tight in a bottle, shaken up frequently and apply with a swab or brush. Add more alcohol if too thick.

CUTTING OFF TEATS.—"F. O. W." desires us to answer through the Agriculturist what to do with a double teat on one of his heifers. Twist a piece of small wire around it sufficiently tight, to obstruct all circulation. In 10 or 12 days the teat will drop off, and new skin will form over the scar. This should not be done, however, when a cow gives milk, for the flow of milk would prevent a scab forming over it.

WEEDS.—These hinder the growth of woody plants as well as they do that of faster growing ones, and every one who raises nursery stock, either for his own use or for sale, will find it to his advantage to keep the plants free of weeds and the soil stirred.

ONIONS.—Harvest as soon as the majority of the tops fall over. Dry thoroughly if they are to be stored. Many send their onions directly from the field to the market, instead of storing them.
